BIBLIOGRAPHY OF TEACHING AIDS

Memo

In supplying this extensive list of books, the intention has been to be of service to the teacher.

1. To help in the purchase of new books.
2. To help locate additional references in other libraries.
3. To facilitate the use of alternate references when a particular reference is not available.
4. To provide greater efficiency in suggesting references for student research.

The references listed are suggested - not mandatory.

Learn to appraise books before purchase. Write in your comments.

Books available in the Home Economics Library, Department of Education, are checked and may be borrowed for previewing.

Creative - Handicrafts Section

Although there is no definite outline concerning the use of crafts in the curriculum guide, it is suggested that this is an integral part o clothing and textiles. The teacher will appreciate the value of crafts to the student and will encourage creative projects relevant to current fashion and within the capability of the student.

There are many excellent references available and the following are listed for your convenience. If possible, try to see the book before purchase to ascertain if it meets your needs.

SOURCES OF TEACHING AIDS

Many firms and government agencies provide booklets, charts and other teaching aids to the home economics teacher. Since these change constantly, it would be wise to contact these sources each year. Many firms require that letters be written on school letterhead.
